Member Programs and Services

The South Dakota Coalition Against Domestic Violence and Sexual Abuse had 20 members during fiscal year 1994-95. Three programs provided domestic violence services only; the other 16 provided both domestic violence and sexual assault services.

Exhibit 1 shows the number of member programs that offered specific types of domestic violence services. Almost all member programs offered community education or a speakers bureau, training for professionals such as police officers or social workers, support groups for women and educational programs in elementary or high schools.

In addition, seven of the member programs noted that they had specific components tailored to the needs of Native Americans. Other special populations served by member programs included the elderly and those affected by community violence and racism.

Less than 25 percent of the programs offered support groups for teenage girls, male victims, spouses, partners, or parents of victims.

Domestic Violence/Sexual Assault Coalition Operations

Figure 1 depicts the percentage of effort allocated to various types of operations by the South Dakota Coalition Against Domestic Violence and Sexual Abuse. Almost 75 percent of the coalition's efforts in fiscal year 1994-95 was dedicated to services advocacy, public awareness/community education, administra-tion. Approximately equal amounts of effort went to each area. An additional onefourth of the coalition's efforts was divided systems advocacy and statewide among planning. Finally, the coalition devoted one percent of its efforts to direct services for victims.

Special Projects of the Domestic Violence/Sexual Assault Coalition

The coalition conducted two special projects as part of its effort to combat violence against women. Both projects were designed to inform and mobilize the general public around issues of domestic violence and sexual assault and are further described below.

Domestic Violence/Sexual Assault Coalition Funding

The South Dakota Coalition Against Domestic Violence and Sexual Abuse received an allotment of money that fell into the second quartile of funding ($70,001 - $175,000) reported by all domestic violence coalitions. In fiscal 1994-95, the coalition received vear nearly one-half of its funding from federal sources (figure 2). Another 40 percent of the coalition's funding was provided by state sources, with the remaining coming from nongovernmental sources such as foundation grants, corporate grants and private donations. The overwhelming majority of the funding, 98 percent, was kept for in house expenses, and the remaining 2 percent was retained for the next fiscal year. The coalition did not distribute funds to its member programs.

Federal and State Funding

All federal funds received by the South Dakota Coalition Against Domestic Violence and Sexual Abuse were obtained from the state coalition grant under the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act.

The coalition received its state funding from three sources: a state formula grant from the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act, a Preventive Health Block Grant, and appropriated or general state funds (exhibit 3). Each source provided a similar amount of funding to the coalition.

Nongovernmental Funding Sources

Nongovernmental funding provided the smallest amount of monies received by the South Dakota Coalition Against Domestic Violence and Sexual Abuse. The coalition received this funding from foundation or corporate grants, private donations, local program dues, investment and interest income, and general membership dues. Exhibit 4 shows the percentage of funds received from each of these sources. Investment and interest income is shown in exhibit 4 as "other nongovernmental sources."

Member Programs and Services

In South Dakota during fiscal year 1994-95, fifteen domestic violence programs were members of the South Dakota Network Against Family Violence and Sexual Assault. All fifteen programs provided domestic violence and sexual assault services.

In addition to offering the services listed in exhibit 5, several member programs provided specific services for Native American populations living on reservations. Other groups served by member programs included Spanish-speaking populations.

Domestic Violence/Sexual Assault Coalition Operations

Figure 3 depicts the percentage of effort allocated to various types of operations by the South Dakota Network Against Family Violence and Sexual Assault. The largest percentage (60 percent) of the network's efforts was dedicated to services advocacy, i.e., work to support the growth and development of community-based domestic violence or sexual assault programs in South Dakota. Another 15 percent of the network's efforts were spent on public awareness/community education issues. The remaining one-fourth the network's endeavors was divided among systems advocacy, administrative efforts, and direct services to victims.

Special Projects of the Domestic Violence/Sexual Assault Coalition

The network did not report any special projects conducted during fiscal year 1996.

Domestic Violence/Sexual Assault Coalition Funding

The South Dakota Network Against Family Violence and Sexual Assault received funding that fell within the second quartile of funding ($7,001 - 75,000) reported by sexual assault coalitions in this inventory. The network received half of its funding from state-administered sources in fiscal year 1996 (figure 4). The federal government directly provided another 41 percent of the network's funding, and the remaining 9 percent came from such nongovernmental sources as local program dues.

All of the funds received by the network were kept to support its internal work including office administration and operating expenses. The coalition did not distribute funds to member programs.

Federal and State Funding

As exhibit 7 shows, federal and state-administered sources provided amounts of money to the South Dakota Network Against Family Violence and Sexual Assault. Two-thirds of the direct federal funding given to the network came from Domestic and Sexual Abuse funds, with the remaining one-third being provided by a Rape Prevention grant. The coalition received all of its state-administered funding from a state formula grant under the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act.

South Dakota State Government Agencies

Two agencies administered funds for domestic violence and sexual assault services in the state of South Dakota, the South Dakota Housing Development Authority and the Department of Social Services at Adult Services and Aging. Each agency reported for a different fiscal year. The role of each agency and its distribution of funds is described below.

South Dakota Housing Development Authority

The South Dakota Housing Development Authority distributed funds for both domestic violence and sexual assault services during its most recently reported fiscal year. In total, the Housing Authority received $270,000 from the federal government's Emergency Shelter Grant Program. All of this money was distributed to local nonprofit/nongovernmental agencies that provided domestic violence services, sexual assault services, and emergency shelter funds for various homeless populations.

Adult Services and Aging, Department of Social Services

The Department of Social Services received $1,319,000, also to be distributed for both domestic violence and sexual assault services. Eighty-one percent of this money came from federal government sources and the remainder was received from South Dakota state government funds. The department distributed almost two-thirds of its funding to local nonprofit/nongovernmental agencies, while the rest was retained for future distribution.

* Nongovernmental funding provided 9% of the total funding

Federal and State Funding Reported by South Dakota State Government Agencies

Approximately 1.6 million dollars were distributed through the two South Dakota state government agencies. As shown in figure 5 and exhibit 9, the federal government provided a little more than four-fifths of the funding that was distributed for domestic violence and sexual assault services in South Dakota

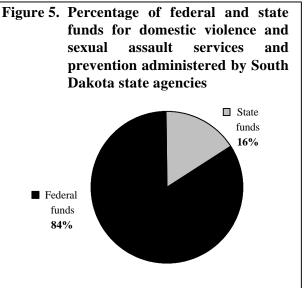

Exhibit 10 lists the federal and state funding sources of the two South Dakota state agencies. All of the South Dakota Housing Authority's funds came from the Emergency Shelter Grant Program, while the Department of Social Services received funding from all other sources listed in exhibit 10. A significant majority of the department's funding came from the combined sources of the federal Victims of Crime Assistance Act (VOCA) and the Stop Violence Against Women Act.

Exhibit 10. Sources of government funding reported by South Dakota state agencies

Federal funds

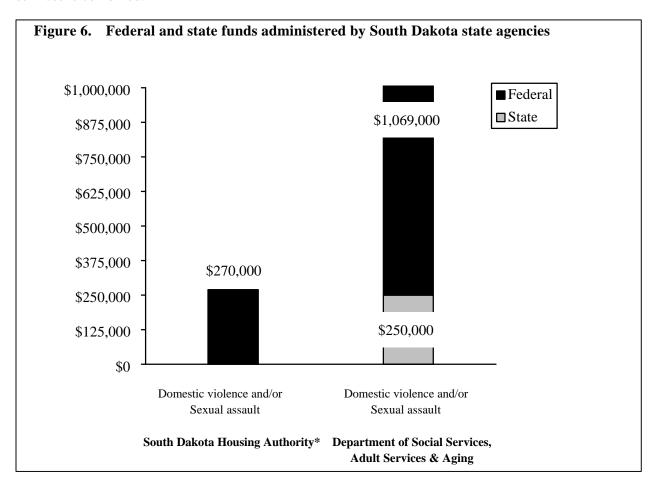

Victims of Crime Assistance - Domestic and Sexual Abuse $443,000 Act - $250,000

Stop Violence Against Women Act - $426,000

Emergency Shelter Grant Program - $270,000

Family Violence Act - $200,000

The Department of Social Services administered almost four times as much funding as the South Dakota Housing Authority (figure 6). Neither agency could report separately on funding for domestic violence organizations and funding for sexual assault organizations, thus funding for both types of services is combined.

*The funds distributed by this agency were also used for emergency shelter for various homeless populations.

Distribution of State-Administered Funds

Figure 7 portrays the amount of money that was distributed to various funding recipients in South Dakota. Local nonprofit/nongovernment agencies received 70 percent of the funds distributed through the two state agencies in South Dakota. The South Dakota Housing Authority distributed all of its funding to these local nonprofit/ nongovernmental agencies. The Department of Social Services distributed almost two-thirds of its funding to the same type of agencies.

In addition, four percent of the total funding ($52,000) was similarly divided among local government agencies and the state domestic violence coalition. The remaining funds ($405,000) were reserved by the Department of Social Services for future distribution.

*In addition to providing services for victims of domestic violence and sexual assault, some of the local nonprofit agencies that received funds from the South Dakota Housing Authority also provided emergency shelter for various homeless populations.

Local Programs and Services Funded Through State Agencies

The South Dakota Housing Development Authority funded 19 local domestic violence and sexual assault programs. However, it was unsure how many of these programs belonged to the state coalition.

The Department of Social Services funded 39 local domestic violence and sexual assault programs. Of those, 29 belonged to the South Dakota Coalition Against Domestic Violence and Sexual Abuse or the Network Against Family Violence and Sexual Assault, however, information was not provided as to the types of services offered by those ten non-member programs.
